

Stratford Hall Plantation in Westmoreland County, Virginia, was the home of four generations of the Lee family of Virginia, including two signers of the Declaration of Independence, and it was the birthplace of Robert Edward Lee (1807 - 70), who became the Confederate General-in-chief during the American Civil War, and then became the president of Washington College, which later became Washington and Lee University.

Stratford Hall is one of the great houses of American history. Its magnificent setting on a high bluff above the Potomac River and its bold architectural style set it apart from any other colonial house. But its highest distinction is the family of patriots who lived there. The Plantation is still managed as a farm today on 1,900 of its original acres. Come and enjoy an unhurried visit to the country!

The roads that lead to Stratford pass through one of the most historic sections of the nation. Yorktown, Jamestown, Williamsburg, Kenmore, Monticello, Gunston Hall and Mount Vernon are all within easy driving distance. Pope's Creek Plantation, birthplace of George Washington, is seven miles west of Stratford; the two historic properties make a perfect one day outing.
